

Senior Care Management

When your employees worry about their aging loved ones, it can affect their performance and their ability to focus at work. Now you can offer them greater peace of mind with Senior Care Management services.

Senior Care Management is viewed as the gold standard in employee-sponsored support for caregivers.¹

What is Senior Care Management?

This employer-subsidized plan gives your employees up to six hours per year with an Senior Care Manager (SCM) to be used for a care recipient the employee is responsible for. The SCM can offer:

In-home assessments. These include evaluation and a customized written plan for a loved one's present and future:

- Physical and mental condition
- Housing and support needs
- Support systems (friends, neighbors, emergency services and more)
- Legal, financial and insurance needs

Facility reviews. SCMs tour selected care facilities to evaluate and report on the environment, care, staffing and overall level of quality.

Post-hospitalization assessments. SCMs visit care recipients in the hospital before discharge to evaluate their needs. In many cases, SCMs will also evaluate the home or facility where a care recipient will be going for aftercare.

Ongoing care coordination. To support the needs of care recipients, SCMs can offer a wide range of services. These include coordinating medical appointments, paying bills, setting up community services and more.

Highly qualified SCMs go above and beyond

SCMs come well-prepared and ready to help. All SCMs:

- Have an undergraduate, masters or doctorate level degree in nursing or social work
- Are primarily engaged in client-centered services for special needs adults, aging adults and their families
- Have completed at least two years of supervised experience in gerontology
- Are licensed and insured in their state

Senior Care Management costs can range from $85-$200 an hour and are often not covered by insurance or Medicare.

Offer your employees peace of mind with Senior Care Management.
